II. ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS

A. Dean, College of Arts and Sciences, New Mexico State University, 2010- 2016.

I oversaw the largest college at NMSU with 24 academic departments and 2 ROTC programs and a budget of over $42,000,000 (24% of the total university budget). The College also maintains 19 buildings on campus. During my tenure as dean, I:

- Oversaw the construction and completion of a $3,7,500,000 Center for the Arts complex, which received the Gold LEED rating

- Supported research activities and attracted productive research scholars who brought in more than $20,000,000 annually
- Created a Grants 4 Grants program to provide mentorship and financial support to assist faculty with preparing grants
- Instituted faculty, staff and student awards program
- Developed a travel grant program for faculty and graduate students
- Established a Dean's Advisory Council composed of community leaders and distinguished alumni
- Created a Diversity Committee to advance our commitment to diversity and to enhance our collaboration with the American Indian Center, Hispanic Caucus, Black Programs, and Sexual and Gender Diversity Resource Center
- Elevated attention of graduate programs by increasing the number of graduate assistantships, creating graduate student lounges, expanding support for graduate student research and travel
- Served on search committees for high level university administrators
- Provided financial support to advance undergraduate student research through a variety of means, including the creation of a Discovery Scholars program that was created with revenues from Distance Education
- Reorganized, updated, and expanded our Advising and Records Center to better serve students and to improve retention rates; created specialized advisors for (1) freshmen, (2) pre-health majors, (3) pre-pharmacy majors and (4) students on academic probation. Intensive intervention program has significantly reduced number of students on academic probation.
- Tripled revenue from distance education courses and developed a revenue-sharing model to distribute funds to academic departments
- Created an interdisciplinary studies department, which is the home to over 350 majors
- Served as a Deans' representative on the university's Strategic Planning Committee; the University Foundation Board; the University Budget Committee, and the Department Head Training Academy.
- Obtained twelve new Distinguished Achievement Professorships
- Managed Enrollment Management funds to provide additional funding for courses for all colleges
- Expanded support for international programs, research, and travel, including providing funds for professors to lead study abroad programs; international research collaboration; faculty and student exchanges; and creation of joint-degree programs
- Developed a successful fundraising strategy that dramatically increased donor giving to the college.

B. Interim Dean, College of Extended Learning, 2013.

The College of Extended Learning was home to the Bachelor of Individualized Studies (BIS) and the Bachelor of Applied Studies (BAS). The provost charged me with the task of administering the college and developing a plan to integrate the college within the College of Arts and Sciences. During my tenure, I:

- Streamlined the application and admission process and placed more emphasis on specialized advising to serve the career goals of students
- Revised the curriculum policies to bring them in line with the policies more broadly shared across the campus

- Established mutually respectful and collaborative relationships with athletic advisors
- Developed the proposal to integrate the College of Extended Learning into the College of Arts and Sciences and presented it to the University Senate, which approved it unanimously. The plan was approved by the provost, president, and Board of Regents.

C. Associate Dean for Educational Affairs and Graduate Studies, College of Liberal Arts, Auburn University, 2007-2010.

My initial role as associate dean for the College of Liberal Arts was to advance the outreach mission of the college and university. Throughout my tenure, my responsibilities were significantly expanded to include strategic planning; oversight of graduate education; expansion of distance education; support for teaching; honors courses; fundraising for fine arts; oversight and evaluation of Band Director, Diversity Officer, Women's Studies Director, Director of Carolyn Marshall Draughon Center for the Arts and Humanities, and Africana Studies Director; and coordination of space allocation and building priority issues.

In that role, I:

- Led the strategic planning process in the college and served as a focus group facilitator for the university-wide strategic planning process.
- Established a Community and Civic Engagement Planning Committee that
 - designed six interdisciplinary, themed learning communities;
 - created a civic engagement/leadership minor;
 - offered an “alternative spring break” course to take students to Appalachia for field work;
 - designed and offered a week-long summer workshop to teach faculty how to create service learning courses and to integrate teaching, research, and outreach
- Obtained funding to support the Engaged Scholars Program that provided two endowed professorships and additional compensation for six faculty scholars and students researchers
- Worked with our technology staff to offer workshop training and provide stipends and equipment to faculty who were developing distance education courses;
- Provided guidance to college committee on teaching excellence to increase the nominations for teaching awards and to offer workshops to promote excellence in teaching. I included the research awards recipients in our annual teaching awards ceremony and featured award recipient in video presentations to showcase their talent. Attendance at awards ceremonies increased dramatically.
- Supported the Diversity Officer's plans to develop outreach and summer programs to minority and underserved populations and to bring them to campus.
- Served on university committee to prepare our successful application for the Carnegie designation as a “Community Engaged Campus.”
- Worked with the Vice-President for Outreach to offer an annual outreach scholarship symposium and lead annual promotion and tenure workshops on outreach
- Served as liaison with Facilities and exercised college oversight of refurbishment and remodeling of college buildings, including the building that housed Liberal Arts, the remodeled psychology building, remodeled Center for the Arts, the expansion of the Theatre building, and the new band practice building
- Revamped and expanded the college website
- Oversaw graduate program accreditation and expansion of graduate programs

- Established a faculty mentoring program to assist them in developing and documenting their outreach activities and developing closer ties and relationships with the community

D. Director, Elections Administration Program, Auburn University, 2002-2010.

Auburn University, in cooperation with the non-profit Election Center, based in Houston, Texas, developed a twelve-course certification program for elections and voter registration officials. This program won a national award in 1994 as the best university continuing education program. I began teaching in the program in 1994 and administered it from 2002-2010. As administrator of the program, I:

- Worked with faculty to design more than twenty courses
- Increased the training program from three locations per year to six
- Expanded the program to include professors from universities in two other states
- Developed an apprenticeship program to train faculty and expand participation in the program taught by faculty from three universities in six different cities each year.
- Created an Elections Administration concentration in our Masters in Public Administration Program
- Received funding to support undergraduate and graduate student travel to elections conferences three times annually
- Created and continuously expanded graduate assistantships to support faculty and students in the expansion of the program
- In 2009, I received a National Association of Secretaries of State (NASS) Medallion for the program. This national award is designed to recognize outstanding service and dedication to furthering NASS's mission: fair and honest elections, civic education and service to state government.

E. Director, Master in Public Administration Program, Auburn University, 1997 – 1999.

In my first year as Director of the MPA Program, I prepared a two-volume, 500-page report for the first recertification of the graduate program. During my tenure, our program regained its ranking as the top program in the state and the 15th ranked small program in the United States. While the director, I

- Established a gifts account;
- Published professional newsletters for alumni;
- Developed a recruitment program and expanded enrollments;
- Placed all students in internships and/or assistantships;
- Established a student service committee structure;
- Renegotiated a student exchange program with Twente University in The Netherlands;
- Recruited new faculty;
- Raised funds to upgrade computer systems and software.

F. Director, Community, Mediation Service, University of Hawaii, 1979 – 1983.

In 1979 I received mediation training from the Institute of Mediation and Conflict Resolution (New York, New York) and co-founded the first neighborhood justice center in the state of Hawaii and the first university-based mediation center in the United States. The center, known as the Community Mediation Service, operated out of the University of Hawaii with trained volunteers from the university and community and had a collaborative case referral system established with the Family Court, Small Claims Office, Police Department, Prosecutor's Office, City of Honolulu Mayor's Office, and various military service in the state of Hawaii.

Department of Political Science, University of Tampere, Finland; This was a four-year research project (2003-2007) based at the University of Tampere in Finland and funded by the Science Academy.

D. Facilitator for International Conferences

I was invited to serve as the conference facilitator for two international conferences on direct democracy. Delegates attended from the United States, Europe, Australia, and Korea. I moderated during the presentation and facilitated during the deliberations and decision-making processes for both conferences.

The Second Congress on International Direct Democracy, Athens and Delphi, Greece (June 21-25, 2000).

Direct Democracy Congress, Pribram, Czech Republic (August 25-27, 1998).

E. Founding Member of Holis: Society for Sustainable Future

This is an international, interdisciplinary organization composed of invited scholars, political leaders, and business leaders who are devoted to the study of environmental sustainability and to collaborative projects to increase public awareness and interest in sustainability issues. I served as a discussant and conference facilitator at the following conferences sponsored by Holis:

“The Role of Myth and Metaphor in Sustainability,” Bolinas, California (March 19-21, 1993)

“Alternative Visions of a Sustainable Society,” Alexandria, Virginia (November 6-8 1992)

“Theories of Social Change,” Pankenham, Canada (July 24-26 1992).

F. Public Opinion Polling

In 1978 I co-designed Hawaii Televote, a method of deliberative public opinion polling developed at the University of Hawaii and utilized at the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention. My partner Ted Becker, and I worked with the Hawaii state legislature and the mayor’s office of Honolulu to create public discussion, deliberation, and decision making on policy-agendas and policy issues. We also received consulting contracts with the following government and private agencies to assist them in policy planning.

GfK Danmark , Copenhagen, Denmark, consultation to private polling firm on deliberative polling, May 22, 1997.

Department of Health, State of Hawaii, “Hawaii Health Decisions ‘83” (A Televote project) (Spring and Summer, 1983) and “Hawaii Health Decisions ‘85” (Summer, 1985).

XI. GRANTS

A. Grant Recipient, Auburn University, Office of Outreach to attend Harvard University Leadership Training (May 18-25, 2007).

I was awarded a grant for the Office of Outreach to attend an eight-day leadership training at Harvard University entitled “The Art and Practice of Leadership”. The Harvard program selects approximately 60 participants from a larger pool of applicants that includes academics, medical doctors, corporate executives, governmental officials, and private and non-profit consultants.

B. Grant Recipient and Focus Group Facilitator for Biomass Energy Grant, U.S. Department of Agriculture and Alabama Department of Agriculture, (May and Just, 2005).

I was part of a research team that conducted focus groups around the state of Alabama to determine if citizens would be willing to pay for more green energy. My role on the team was to assist with the questionnaire design and analysis and serve as the focus group facilitator in four Alabama cities; Opelika, Montgomery, Mobile, and Huntsville.

C. Grant Recipient, Kettering Foundation and Auburn University Economic Development Institute, Uniontown, Alabama Project to study citizen participation, (2000-2005).

My portion of the project focused on facilitating dialogue and deliberation among citizens and between citizens and government officials on issues affecting the economic vitality of the community. The non-profit citizen’s group, Uniontown Cares, was created under this grant and became the first multi-racial civic organization in the town. The organizations activities included such projects as: fund-raising for the fire department; development of city web-site; restoration of former slave cemetery; book drive; clean-up of city playgrounds and parks; establishment of Alcoholics Anonymous; photo exhibit; and partnering with Auburn University to receive equipment donations and skills training for residents of the city.

D. Auburn University Outreach Delegation to Study “Civic Engagement and Land Grant University Mission,” at University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota, funded by Kettering Foundation, (December 10-12, 2001).

This project was completed when the university senate was considering elevating outreach to the same status as research and teaching in the University’s mission. A four-person team spent three days consulting with University of Minnesota administrators, professors, and students and observing outreach activities. The information gathered from that experience contributed to the ultimate decision made by the Auburn faculty to include outreach as a primary mission of the university.

E. Grant Recipient and Conference Participant, “Creating Future-Oriented Governance,” Future Generations Alliance Foundation, Honolulu, Hawaii (January 9-12, 1996).

This was an international conference sponsored by a Japanese foundation that brought together scholars from a variety of disciplines to propose government reforms that would promote long-range planning and concern for the well-being of future generations.

F. Grant Recipient and Workshop Participant, Community Service Foundation, Real Justice Project, Allentown, Pennsylvania (March 25-29, 1995).

I was selected to be a part of the first group of Americans trained in “restorative justice,” a method of dealing with juvenile offenders, who are incarcerated. This program designed by a group of Australians, who were trainer for the first group of Americans to learn the skills to bring victims and offenders together with family and friends in an effort to address and repair harm done to all parties.

G. Grant Recipient and Workshop Participant, Markle Foundation, Electronic Town Meeting Project, Snowmass, Colorado (October 3-7, 1994).

This grant was given to a group of scholars, business leaders, members of various forms of media, and professional facilitators to develop a model for electronic “town meetings” of citizens via television, radio, internet, and face-to-face that address complex policy issues. The grant also required proposal for funding electronic town meetings, either privately or publicly. The grant was the culmination of activities begun by participants at a conference entitled “Designing the Next Generation of Electronic Town Meetings,” that I co-organized with the Meridian International Institute Conference, San Francisco, California (March 27-28, 1993).

H. Grant Recipient and Conference Participant at International Conference for Mediators (1985 and 1987):

Organization of Mediators Conference, Hewlett Foundation and Asia Foundation, University of Hawaii (Summer, 1987).

Delegate and Charter Member, Asia-Pacific Organizations of Mediators, The Asia Foundation, Manila, The Philippines (August 12-17, 1985).
